Pirate's Buried Gold.

Not long ago a Mr. Palmer purchased a track of land situated on the south bank of English bayou, at its junction with the Calcasieu. This property is about three miles from town and is commonly known as the "English Bayou Bluffs." To all intents this gentleman made the deal simply for speculation. So it may be imagined that Mr. Palmer was overwhelmed by the legend which was told him a few days ago. He was one morning in his office when an old Creole came in and introduced himself. He suddenly inquired if Mr. Palmer hadn't made a deal for the land lying about the mouth of the bayou. On being answered in the affirmative he told this story:

"Along in the first part of this century things were rocky in these parts. There was no town here then, and, with the exception of a few scattered ranches, the country was held by Indians. Calcasieu river and its tributaries were in possession of the pirate Lafitte. For years he made this section one of his hiding places, and a secure one it was, for once across the bar with his clipper built schooners he was beyond the reach of the average deep water cruiser. But it is said that on one occasion his pursuers crossed the bar and chased him up the river, for he sailed up as far as English bayou, and there on these high banks, in the angle formed by the two streams, he buried $800,000 in gold. Then, going about 200 yards further up the Calcasieu, he sunk his vessel and with his men took to the dense swamps, leaving his pursuers no clue as to his whereabouts, and they probably never knew what became of the vessel or its crew."

Whether the man spoke the truth or not we are unable to say, but in all probability there is some ground for the legend. At all events, the story leaked out, and one morning, before a week had passed, freshly dug holes on the bluffs showed that some one had been prospecting for the lost gold.

Up the Calcasieu, about a mile from this spot, there is a locality which has always borne a special charm for the fortune hunter, as well as for those in search of ancient legends. As with the other place, Lafitte is the hero of the tale, but the treasure reposes at the bottom of the river. It seems that the pirate suddenly found himself in a tight place with one of his vessels. On board were heaps of costly jewelry, diamonds, rubies and pearls, which he had taken from merchant men on the high seas. Either he had a notion of his own or because he did not have time to do otherwise, Lafitte filled one of his cannon with this fabulous wealth, and sealing it up threw it overboard in the bend of the river.

GOOD LOOKS & PAIN

When you see a "good-looking" woman, you nearly always see a healthy woman. Beauty is really health. It is the attractiveness of face and form that comes naturally when weakness and pain are absent. Sickness and pain drive attractiveness away.

It is difficult to make women believe their troubles can be cured at home. The popular belief is that they must suffer on and on—or go to a physician, and reveal secrets that he ought not to know.

Nine-tenths of women's troubles can be cured without physician's aid.

McELREE'S

WINE OF CARDUI

is a remedy that stops the drain on the system. It stops the pains that drag and pull at the organs of womanhood. It makes them strong and well. It makes them attractive by making them healthy. Price $1 per bottle.
